Scholarship Conditions

Program fees are structured to have an organisational component and an individual component. In rare cases, a full (100%) scholarship may be provided, but generally scholarships contribute all or part of the organisational component ($17,850+GST), and the successful applicant is expected to contribute the individual component ($2,000+GST). Payment plans are available for self-funded participants.

The successful applicant will be required to commit to full attendance and participation in the program. Applicants should carefully consider the time commitment before applying – a successful applicant who finds they are unable to meet the requirements must forgo the scholarship, and may have denied another community leader the opportunity to undertake the program.

Selected candidates will be expected to participate in a range of communications activities connected with their scholarship, including, but not limited to:

- newsletter and magazine articles
- social media posts
- website stories
- media opportunities.

Additionally, they are required to contribute to scholarship progress reporting.

Scholarships are not transferable, and also cannot be deferred.
